1.0 Patent Applications published under Section 42 and Regulation 35.

1.1 National Application

(21) Application no.: KE/P/2024/4757 (22) Filing Date: 11/01/2024

(51) Int.Cl. F 16L 59/04(2006.01)

(54) Title: A PIPE CLADDING TOOL

(72) Inventors: JOSEPH ODHIAMBO

(73) Applicant(s): KENYA ELECTRICITY GENERATING COMPANY PLC 47936-00100 NAIROBI, Kenya

(57) The present invention relates to fabrication of a fastening device that will bring the insulation cover as close as possible to the insulator by tightening and giving it a smooth finish. The device is in belt form and is used to rap around the line piping of any size and mainly made from stainless steel materials. The width is 1" (one inch) and thickness of around 2 mm, the length vary from the longest 98" to the shortest 36".Currently the use of a rope and stick is a bit cumbersome, tedious and risky to the user. It also doesn't give a good uniform finish in addition, it takes a long time to work with. With this invention, one needs to rap around the work piece, tighten the belt after looping through the fasteners. Use the upper lock to hold the puller, then use the puller screw to tighten to the required diameter. If the screw happens to finish the threads before the cover is tight enough, then use the stopper clump at the tail end of the belt to hold the tensioned belt at the current position. Loosen the upper lock and unwind the tightened screw before tightening the upper lock again and tighten your work piece again as desired. One can use a power tool for faster process. The screw stud that is at the lock areas is good to note that they are not making any contact with the belt because there is a plate that is between them. This place ensures that to stud does not deform the belt when being tightened. It's very easy to use and only requires a verbal instruction or a small demonstration to a new user

(54) Title: SOLAR ENERGY HEATED AND AMMONIA GAS FREE CHICKEN BROODER
(51) Int.Cl.2018.01: A 01K 31/19(2006.01)

(57) Abstract: A structure that harnesses, stores and transmits solar energy in the brooding space. Further, the structure discharges chicken wastes, spilled drinking water and feeds residues from the brooding floor as soon as the materials are generated; subsequently minimizing the emission of ammonia gas in the brooding space. Emission of ammonia gas in chicken rearing units is as result of decomposition of feeds remnants and birds' droppings in dump environment. Effects of ammonia gas in the brooder are minimized by the enhanced ventilation of the unit provided by large volume of brooding space and chimney. The structure is important in reducing dependence on biomass or fossil energy for brooding chicken.

(57) Abstract: A method and system are provided for processing of data records. The method includes processing raw data records including a first type having static values and a second type relating to transactional records with timestamps of events. The data records are filtered and transformed to standardized formats. The transformed data records are persisted into a first data store for static data relating to entities for retrieval based on static values, and a second data store for transactional data for retrieval based on timestamps. Different categories of transactional records are grouped according to the unique identifiers of entities. The categories are persisted to different tables including maintaining a table of stable size for efficient access of a category of transactional records that is most frequently accessed. The persisted data is used for retrieving features relating to an entity from multiple tables for processing to provide an output relating to the entity.

(57) Abstract: Provided are a terminal device, a base station device and a communication method which can improve reliability and frequency utilization efficiency when using beamforming for transmission. The terminal device comprises a reception unit that receives a downlink shared channel including configuration information, downlink control information and transport blocks, and a signal detection unit that uses the redundancy version included in the downlink control information to decode the downlink shared channel. The configuration information includes the number of consecutive slots in which the same transport block will be repeatedly transmitted. A demodulation reference signal (DRMS) to be transmitted in at least two of the consecutive slots is not related to quasi-colocation (QCL). The redundancy version is determined from the slot index of the consecutive slots, and information indicating the QCL.

(57) Abstract: A process and system are disclosed for producing lithium oxide from lithium nitrate. In the process and system, the lithium nitrate is thermally decomposed in a manner such that a fraction of the lithium nitrate forms lithium oxide, and such that a remaining fraction of the lithium nitrate does not decompose to lithium oxide. The thermal decomposition may be terminated after a determined time period to ensure that there is a remaining fraction of lithium nitrate and to thereby produce a lithium oxide in lithium nitrate product. The lithium oxide in lithium nitrate product may have one or more transition-metal oxides, hydroxides, carbonates or nitrates added thereto to form a battery electrode. The lithium oxide in lithium nitrate product may alternatively be subjected to carbothermal reduction to produce lithium metal.

(54) CARBON SINK PLANTERS BOX COMPRISING NUTRITIONAL FORMULATION IN BIODEGRADABLE BAG SHEATHS FOR TREE SEEDLINGS

(51) A 01G 17/00(2006.01)

(57) Disclosed in the present invention is a carbon sink planters' box comprising a square hollow box with an empty space in the middle of the box having a biodegradable bag sheaths with mixtures where ae, plant or tree sapling is planted. The sides of the inner box are lined with a formulated mixture of rocks,organic waste matter, fertilizer and biochar. The hollow box space is for seedlings and saplings in that the formulation is selected and designed to increase the tree seedling/sapling survival rate by over percent in water-scarce settings. The formulation in the carbon sink planters provides the solution to dryland and degraded soil farming. The box provides a conducive microclimate for plants in dryland fanning, lowers irrigation costs and enrich soil around roots, aiding strong growth in tough conditions capable of accommodating about 200-300 trees per acre .
