(57) The invention consists of a system and a method for alcohol detection and automatic vehicle speed control relative to the legal speed limit of a localized geographic region. An alcohol sensor is placed in the vehicle that begins checking for alcohol when vehicle is ignited. If alcohol is detected, a method for sobriety test that consists but not limited to use of a preset password/randomly generated codes and a keypad is initiated. When the test is passed, the vehicle can move, else it is immobilized. The speed control method consists of radio frequency transmitter(s) placed on strategic points on the road sending legal speed limit commands. A matching receiver is in the vehicle that on receipt of the viable commands automatically limits the speed of the vehicle to that value for that section and on clearing it rests it. A display system in the form of a Liquid Crystal Display (LCD) is availed for the driver to show current vehicle status and a warning mechanism for other motorists when alcohol is detected.
